JANE GOODMAN

Jane Goodman was a paediatric dentist of significant renown. A consultant at the Eastman Dental Hospital, where she spent most of her career; she was, inter alia, a specialist in the management of children with absent teeth. Her pioneering work as part of a multidisciplinary UK team ensures an enduring legacy. She had many national and international roles of significant distinction and was held in the greatest respect both at home and abroad.

She had many friends and colleagues and pursued her interests in depth and with enthusiasm. She died in 2019 and her legacy has been to aid many organisations which she had long supported. Growing up, she had known a number of Holocaust Survivors, and Holocaust Learning UK has benefited greatly from her interest in the field, as well as her recognition of the importance of ensuring understanding among new generations.

She was a welcoming hostess and a kind and loyal friend. She was fiercely independent and hugely resilient. Everyone who knew her, from whatever walk of life, felt privileged to have done so.
